

The People's Column

Hundreds of boys and girls from Brazos and surrounding counties are preparing to enter college this fall. Some are already departing for their schools. But beyond college most young men and young women are looking forward to life. College is a sort of apprenticeship, a preparation for life and life's work.

Before taking courses in college most young people should have their minds made up on what they are to do after college. Bruce Barton, widely known writer, in a current issue of "Good Housekeeping" magazine, gives a few timely thoughts to the young man or young woman.

Guards attacked from an adjoining roof, the convicts hurling missiles and the guards firing.

Captain W. W. Pegue declared the men were "too lazy to work."

The parish coroner who was called to the farm two or three hours after the shooting, said that Capt. W. W. Pegue, in charge of the farm, told him the men had gone on strike. Following an investigation the coroner named John Stovall, negro trusty guard from East Baton Rouge, serving life for murder, as the man who had shot down Blackwell. Both Stovall and Blackwell were listed in penitentiary records here as being confined at Angola, on the opposite bank of the river from Pointe Coupee.

Don't Wipe Dishes, Says Health Head; Job Is Dangerous

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 27.—

Dr. W. A. King, San Antonio health officer, is the authority for this. He has advised all housewives against the dangers of germ transference through the use of dish towels and the touching of dishes during drying.

If a person is going to wipe dishes with towels, which it is almost impossible to keep perfectly sanitary, one might almost as well not wash them.

The proper way—and it is not a lazy way, for it is the only healthful method—is to wash the dishes in hot soapy water, then place them in a rack, scald them, and leave them to drain and dry, Dr. King said.

According to City Manager R. G. Williams it will be impossible to make a schedule of operation for the streets in the business section or for the paved streets of the residence sections until after operation covering a few nights, but it is the intention of the city officials to impose the least possible hardship or inconvenience on either Bryan or transient motorists in working out an ordinance prohibiting parking during certain hours of the night, when the sweeper will be in operation.

Will Rogers Says

To the Editor of The Eagle: TAHOE TAVERN, Cal., Aug. 27.—Well, this week takes care of pretty much the last of the primaries. This will throw thousands in every state back among the unemployed. Everybody is always asking if women voting has made any real change in our political system. It has. It has just doubled the amount of candidates. The only way we can possibly have more people seeking pensions is to give the children the vote. We have done it for the wife, let's do it for the kiddies. Children have the same qualification for office the grown ups have—they are out of work.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

Need for an airport or for a landing field that would serve both College Station and Bryan was brought to the attention of chambers of commerce officials and of college faculty members again today, according to Secretary William McCullough of the Bryan and Brazos County Chamber of Commerce.

Car Is Ditched; Two Bryan Boys Slightly Hurt

Rock Boone received one ugly flesh wound and several scratches and bruises and Albert Hemanan escaped apparently without injury when their car left the road about three miles north of Bryan on the highway at about 3 a. m. this morning, when the boys were returning from a dance at Calvert.

The boys said they were both asleep and apparently they drove for some the edge of a small creek. At any rate the car went in the ditch and was pretty badly damaged in the accident. The boys were able to extricate themselves from the wreckage and "foot it" down the road to a filling station, where they stopped and phoned Rock's mother, Mrs. J. E. Boone, to come after them.

While still under observation for possible internal injuries, it is thought that neither Boone or Hemanan will suffer any serious results from the experience.

Beating His Wife Is Specialty of Off Jailed Negro

The chief ambition of Louis Van Hook, negro, according to Sheriff J. H. Reed, is to beat up his spouse. Accused on this charge, Van Hook will make a bond, go home and beat her and then be taken right back to the hoosegow, apparently well satisfied, though still threatening to "beat her up" again.

A day or two ago Louis was arrested after his wife had charged him with assaulting her with a good, stiff club, and he was placed in jail. While in prison he made threats as to the sort of beating he would give his spouse, once he was free again, and diligently sought bond. When this was arranged Louis started for home.

This morning he is back in the county jail, having carried out his threat and given his better half the prime beating of her life. Now Louis is again seeking bond and says that what he has done, in the way of chastising his mate will not be a patch to what she'll get when he is out of jail again.

But county officials, realizing that his wife stands in fear of her life, plan to release Louis only on a police bond.

Ship Many Hogs From His County Says Alabamian

M. E. Williamson, vice director of Extension Service, A. B. Jackson, officer of publications for the Experiment Station, and John R. Cook, Jr., W. Williamson of Harbort, Ala., have returned from a trip to Crystal City and other points along the Rio Grande, including popular resorts along the Mexican side of that stream.

Dr. Williamson, who is a distant kinsman of Mr. Williamson and Mr. Jackson, has been visiting Texas from time to time during the past 25 years and has observed the development and progress made in this section of the state in the course of that time. After a drive about Bryan this morning, Dr. Williamson stated that he observed more building and civic improvement in progress here than he saw elsewhere in the course of his 250 mile drive through 25 counties.

Dr. Williamson's home county of Geneva, in Alabama, covers an area of 12 by 40 miles and holds a record of 180 car loads of hogs shipped to market during 1929. The poultry industry is also well developed in that section, according to Dr. Williamson, and interest in dairy farming is increasing from year to year. Dorse and Poland China breeds are the most popular among hog breeders of that section, says Dr. Williamson, and peanuts and soybean beans are raised extensively as feed products on the farm there.

After spending some time looking over the peach orchard on the McDonald farm and other features of interest about the McDonald farmstead, the boys and Mr. Lovelock enjoyed a feast of seed melons with the McDonalds before returning to Bryan and their homes.

Boys who enjoyed the outing were: Earl Shelton, Alva Taylor, Morris Williamson, Morris Johnson, Bob Cloud and Ted McGregg.

Street Sweeper Bought Thursday By City Fathers

Quarters of public garages and hotel keepers of Bryan are requested to meet with members of the Bryan city commission Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the city hall auditorium, for the purpose of discussing parking on public streets in view of the fact that within the next thirty days the city will have a new street sweeper in operation. Commissioners E. E. Yenger and Forest Jones and City Manager R. C. Williams will represent the city.

The plan under consideration for the operation of the sweeper, to start it in the business section each night at midnight and to clean the streets in this part of the city each night.

The schedule for the paved streets in the residence section, which also will be gone over at least once each week, and at night, will be worked out so that residents may know in advance when the streets on which they may happen to live will be gone over. The work in the residence sections will be done before midnight, it is believed now.

The city commission opened bids on street sweepers late Thursday and decided to purchase an Austin-Western machine. The bid of this company was $495 less than that of any competitor and the price is $5,270 net to the city.

Cotton Movement Gains Momentum In Local Market

During the past week cotton has been moving rapidly into the Bryan market. In that period, from Monday of last week to Saturday night, 243 bales were received. This makes the total amount received of this season's crop, 4,526 bales, up to the first of this week.

Estimates of the number of bales that will be raised in Brazos county vary considerably but the common opinion seems to be that the crop will approximate 16,000 bales.

U. S. ESTIMATE CUT DOWN BY 245,000 BALES

Figures Given Today By Commissioner Agriculture

EFFECTS OF DROUGHT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(P)—George E. Dorell, commissioner of agriculture, estimated the Texas cotton crop at 4,250,000 bales, based on August 15 reports.

This is 245,000 bales less than the federal estimate August 1, and which Dorell said was justified by the continued drought.

The Texas Cotton Cooperative Association has announced the following:—

charge of marketing and information service J. C. Powers at Bryan; Alfred Clark at Beaumont.

The local committee will make advances on members' cotton; make payments on the spot when cotton is sold; give information, and assist members in shipping. It will also send samples to the nearest licensed classifier of the association, receiving prompt returns, and figuring the sale price or the amount of advance on this classification.

It is expected that the association system of paying for cotton according to actual staple value will bring a worthwhile improvement in the quality of cotton in this section. "Put the cash on the barrelhead," said an association representative here recently, "and the farmer will have reason for growing good staple. Every farmer and businessman knows that poor staple is taking dollars out of his pocket every year. But as long as cotton is sold under the old 'hog-wash' or 'joint' basis system, poor staple will continue for the good staple seldom brings more than the poor staple bale. They both get the average basis, set by the average staple of the community. Under the association plan, the intelligent farmer will make an effort to grow better staple, because he will see each return."

Durhams Return From Long Trip; Use "Texas Air"

Superintendent Harry L. Durham, Mrs. Durham, their son, Wayne and their daughter Sara Lee, returned late yesterday afternoon from an extended vacation trip by automobile. They visited Washington, D. C., and other points of interest in that section, making the trip there through the Shenandoah Valley, and the return trip by the Virginia way.

They motored through twelve states, and according to Mr. Durham made the trip of 5,000 miles on "Texas air", not having a tire puncture until they reached Houston on the return trip.

"A fine trip and a delightful vacation," said Supt. Durham, "but Bryan is the best yet, and we are all mighty glad to get back home."

Conservation of Oil

The action of the state railroad commission Tuesday in limiting the daily output of the various oil fields of the state to an approximate maximum of 764,000 barrels should strike most laymen, as it is said to impress men in the oil industry, as a figure that would permit the various operators to care for the demand made on them and, at the same time, conserve in some degree, the total supply of the liquid gold.

When it is considered that the West Texas fields alone produce approximately one-seventh of the world's oil and that other Texas fields have been heavily drained in the competition for the world's markets, there appears reason for conservation methods that will serve to protect the needs of the coming generation and not only assure them an adequate supply of oil and oil products, but at a reasonable cost.

Although scientists are not agreed in their estimates of the quantity of oil that underlies the soil of Texas, or of other oil producing states, they are agreed that the supply is not an everlasting one and that the day will come when some other fuel will have to be discovered or devised to replace oil and gasoline and natural gas. Whether that will be twenty years hence or a century away no man can say with certainty.

But the fact that the supply is limited, especially so in view of the increasing demand for motor fuels, should offer a primary reason for a scheme of conservation that would tend to cut production to the lowest minimum compatible with demand. Moreover, it might be argued that the people of the whole state have a definite interest and right in this natural wealth and that not only conservation of the resources but some system of taxation that would build up a fund for education purposes in future years, when this resource may be exhausted or materially depleted, should be worked out.

Sight should not be lost of the fact that today the oil resources of this country are being more heavily drained than those of any other, and that if this drain continues the day will dawn when the United States will be compelled to look abroad for its oil supply. Conservation should find many supporters and few objections should be made to a program, equitable to the various producing interests, and that would permit a production equalling demand.

Garbage Disposal

Looking ahead to the proper development of Bryan and to those improvements demanded by a proper conservation of health, it is not difficult to figure out that one of the serious needs of the city is a proper garbage disposal plant—one of sufficient capacity to care for the needs of the city over a reasonable period of years and of a design that can be added to, so far as furnace capacity is concerned.

Today Bryan residents depend almost altogether for garbage disposal on stock raisers, most of them negroes, who drive into the city and remove garbage. Their service at the best is uncertain, in view of the fact that it depends upon health or sickness, condition of roads, number of hogs on hand and other factors. Moreover, it is not a sanitary method of disposal and garbage is not kept about many homes, awaiting collection, in sanitary containers.

A modern incinerator, properly located, and sanitary methods of collection, at home and by the city, would serve to improve standards of sanitation and health in a material degree and this installation would put Bryan in the class of cities that have realized the importance of handling this municipal problem in the best possible method, considering the health of the community. This improvement may not be made at once, but it is one that will grow more imperative as the city grows and it is one that should have the attention of citizens and city officials.

Farming Not For All

It is not surprising that three deaths from heat occurred in the cotton fields of the prison system. While the circumstances could, of course, reveal attendant brutality, it is entirely possible that the mere exposure to the sun of those who had been long indoors was enough during the recent high temperatures to result in the fatalities. The base of the brain is at the mercy of the sun's rays in picking cotton, and even an experienced outdoor worker has had about all he could withstand with the thermometer going above 120 in the open.

There is folly in expecting every prisoner to be a fit farm worker, just as there is injustice in determining that the only industry that shall have prison competition shall be the farming industry. There ought to be factories for the employment of men who are more suited to that kind of work. The object of prison work is not punitive, primarily. At least it ought not to be. Instead, it ought to be a part of the means of supporting the prisoner's expenses incurred by the State and, if possible, provide a margin for the benefit of the prisoner's dependents, if any there may be. Beyond that, the prisoner's work ought to aim to fit him for return to civil life. Certainly the minimum to be demanded of it is that it shall not injure his health seriously.

Eventually Texas will have to come to a factory system as an auxiliary to its farms in the working of its convicts. The political outcry that has been raised in this particular is not based on study of penology or of economic data from Texas prison farms. It is largely a matter of vehemence and personalities. Meanwhile three convicts are dead, partly because our prison system is a clumsy affair ill adjusted to the purposes it ought to serve.—The Dallas News.

The Bryan Lions have pledged their support to an anti-tick campaign in Brazos county. If every business man in the county got behind this movement the chances are that old Brazos would quickly be made too tough, even for ticks.

One of the peculiar facts of the recent drought is that apparently it had no ill effect on the crop of miniature golf courses.

Keep Up the Good Fight

Saturday the thinking men and women of Texas, jealous of the good name of this great state and believing firmly in the need for honesty in government and for admitted responsibility to public trust, made known to the world—waiting with ill-concealed eagerness for their verdict—that the day of "proxy" government in Texas was past and gone and no man could again be chosen to the governorship of the Lone Star State without admitting his responsibility to the people and who was regarded as honest in this admission.

The cause of good government took a long step forward Saturday. The record of Ross S. Sterling is one of high regard for trust imposed and of straight forwardness and honesty in all his dealings. As a citizen of Houston he has given largely of his money and of his time and effort for the advancement of the best interests of that city and her people. Men and women of Houston have a high appreciation for the character of service he has rendered. As chairman of the state highway commission his service has been of the same high character. He took this department, when it was seriously handicapped and after it had lost the confidence of the federal government and by the use of hard common sense and honest dealing brought order out of chaos and won back for the state of Texas the federal road aid that is so important, when the size of the road building undertakings of this state are considered. In his private life, in his social dealings, Mr. Sterling has displayed the same characteristics that have marked him in the world of business and as a state official. Because his life has been an open book and because he has had nothing to conceal from his fellows, the vicious attacks made on him in the recent campaign fell flat.

The people of Texas may expect Mr. Sterling, as governor, to employ common sense business methods in the discharge of the duties of his office. As a business man he knows that half a loaf is better than none and instead of fighting losing fights he may be expected to go as far as possible toward a solution of those problems which today tend to handicap and lower the efficiency of government.

There is no reason why lack of confidence should be felt in the Democratic nominee and there is every reason why every citizen of Texas, interested in the greatest possible measure of economic and social progress, should hold himself ready to co-operate with Mr. Sterling and to aid him and other public servants of the people of Texas in every possible way in bringing the government of the state to the highest possible plane of efficiency. There never was a time when close cooperation of all the citizens of Texas, interested in the increased development of the state and the improved welfare of her people, was more necessary. Nor has there been a time when the benefits for all the people to be gained from honest and hearty cooperation, on the side of honest and efficient government, promise to be so great as during the next two years. The men and women who voted for honesty and efficiency in government Saturday should continue seeking that ideal—continue to rally about that banner.

Steps Toward An Airport

Full discussion of the need existing in Bryan for an airport that will serve this city and College Station and of ways and means whereby this need may be met, is planned by the Bryan and Brazos County Chamber of Commerce for the regular meeting of the directors next Tuesday. At that time all data that has been gathered in the past year, or since the question of an airport here was first seriously considered, will be gone over and efforts will be made, it is understood, to work out plans whereby this dream may be realized.

In considering this matter there are a few facts that should be considered. One is that Texas ranks well toward the top of the list of states in the number of towns and cities that have established airports meeting the requirements of the federal government. Another is that Texas is criss-crossed by as many or more air routes than any other state and others are to be added in the near future. A third is that one of the early air mail routes established in this state, that between Houston and Dallas, passes directly over this city. And as aerial traffic between these two cities increases, as unquestionably will be the case, more and more planes will pass over this city and there will be a greater probability for need of a field here by these aerial travelers.

At the present time there is a real need here for a landing field that will be comparatively safe. Many army planes are flown to Texas A. & M. College and during the course of a year a considerable number of privately owned planes seek a landing there. As aerial travel becomes more common it is reasonable to believe that the College will be the objective of more aerial travelers.

If there were no other need for a field here than to care for those planes that come here with College as their objective, except for use in emergency by planes traveling the route that takes them over this city, it would be well if this field were located near Bryan rather than at College, since then it would be recognized as a Bryan rather than a College Station field. Moreover, it is reasonable to believe that as time passes there will be more and more planes pointed for this city and a field here would be more advantageous to those aerial travelers than one at College.

Bryan is one of the comparatively few cities of its size in Texas that has not located or taken definite steps to locate a landing field or airport. The time will come, without question, when a field will be located here. If we admit this, then it seems reasonable to believe that the earlier this location is obtained the better. Not only should it be possible to secure this land at a more reasonable figure now than ten years hence, for example, when Bryan will have grown materially and land values appreciated, but the city will have been given recognition that much earlier as one of those progressive communities that has an eye to future developments and is not to be caught napping.

It is to be hoped that the directors of the chamber of commerce will be able to work out some plan that will result in the speedy acquisition of land well located and of proper contours and that in the near future Bryan may be listed among those cities that have provided accommodations for the aerial traveler who may desire—or be forced—to make a landing here.

Now it is charged that the Seminole Indians in Florida are being contaminated by groups of irresponsible whites. If this is true it wouldn't be the first time, in this country or in others, that aborigines have been given lowered standards of living by contact with the so-called superior races.

Chairman Legge of the federal farm board still is pleading for an adjustment of farm production as a means of raising prices. That's the trouble. Every fellow wants to have his neighbor cut while he raises a big crop for the big price.

The returns from the election Saturday would indicate that a good many of the boys who once lived at the forks of the creek have moved to town and gotten a new slant on things.

Today In History

The battle of Long Island was fought August 27, 1776.

Twenty-Five Years Ago

(Taken from the files of The Bryan Morning Eagle, Aug. 27, 1905, twenty five years ago.)

A fall carnival will be held at San Angelo.

Apparently doctors and sanitarians are winning their fight with "Yellow Jack" at New Orleans. Both deaths and new cases are steadily decreasing there according to reports.

Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Longworth of Ohio are both members of a party accompanying Secretary Taft on a visit to Turkey and other Eastern countries.

Mrs. Lizzie Slaughter has returned from a visit at Benchley. Mayor R. H. Harrison and W. H. Boyett have returned from an official visit to Galveston.

Mrs. W. C. Wyche has returned to Tucson, Ariz., after a visit here with Mrs. Fred Pryor.

F. W. Yeager of Millican was a business visitor here yesterday.

J. S. Mooring has returned from a business trip to Hearne.

Miss Winnie Thomas is visiting at Benchley.

Mrs. Fred H. Simmons and baby of Austin are here for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Robinson.

Misses Jessie Pritchett and Nellie Whaling have returned to Huntsville after a visit here with Mrs. H. M. South.

J. H. Webb has gone to Chicago to visit style centers and buy goods for fall trade.

Whenever you are traveling for business or pleasure in winter or summer and you visit a live looking town and mention to one of the citizens that there is a better town to live in than his snicks and tells you that there is none better, it's a sign that it's a live town. The chances are that he is right and it will pay you to stick around a while and look it over.

In such towns you will find a spirit of friendliness and good fellowship, which does so much to help in making a progressive city. Where this spirit is shown by citizens, that town is sure to rise in achievement and stand out proudly as a worth while place.

What an amazing contrast can be seen between the towns whose citizens are proud of it and those towns whose citizens take no pride in the home city and knock it at every opportunity.

Towns are not built by chance—they are built by men and women; they are built by citizens who are proud of it and who cooperate together to make it brighter, busier and better.

Every citizen should be proud of their home town and always boost it and help it on its way.

GRADE CROSSING ACCIDENTS

Statistics show that fully fifteen fatal accidents are the daily average at railroad grade crossings, in spite of modern warning signals and devices. Investigation along the same line indicates that very large majority of such accidents are due either to the carelessness or recklessness of drivers of automobiles or trucks. There is no driver of a motor but knows the danger at grade crossings; he knows the approaching train will not stop for him to cross and therefore it is up to him to do the safe thing and stop. One reason for so many accidents lies in the fact, perhaps, that highway building has greatly increased the number of such crossings, a fact that in itself demands extra precaution on the part of motorists. A great many accidents included in the count of fatalities are caused by the motorist running into the train, which must occur from bad judgment or a car not properly equipped for prompt halting. This brings in that other factor of fast driving and failure to observe that danger lurks ever at the crossing. Many accidents occur when the motorist thinks he can beat the train to a certain crossing, but fails to clear the track in time to escape a journey to that other world. A case in point where two men raced near the railroad track with a passenger train, the engineer watching them and confidently expecting they would not attempt to cross ahead of the train. He did not slacken the speed of the engine and when it was too late saw to his horror that the driver intended to attempt the crossing. He failed signally and in due course of time two funerals followed that reckless attempt to beat a train to a crossing that the two men in the car knew of as well as the engineer on the fast train. No law can be framed and passed to cure motorists of the mania of speeding and the effort to beat a train to some crossing. Common sense and safety of life and limb must prompt the motorist to cease from the dangerous pastime of speeding to a railroad crossing.—Greenville Banner.

Grows Herd Feed Supply

Frank Merka, local dairyman, has recently harvested 85 acres of feed crops, consisting of corn, beggar, peas and Sudan. Mr. Merka states that he will have ample feed to run his herd of 25 to 30 milk cows through the winter. This feed crop was harvested with a row binder, enough of it being run thru a feed mill each day to supply 26 cows with a fine ration, with the exception of cotton seed meal needed to balance up the ration. His monthly feed bill is reduced from $285 to $85.

Mr. Merka will cooperate with the county agent by keeping a record on the entire herd in order to ascertain the exact cost of each pound of butterfat produced, the record showing the average for the entire herd. This report, together with others obtained from other dairymen, should serve to show whether or not the dairy industry is worth while, and how much.

Profits In Poultry

Paul A. Cunyus, assistant poultry husbandman, Extension Service, states that records turned in for May on 71,334 hens show that the average cost per dozen of eggs was 10.9 cents above the cost of feed, the average profit per hen for the month of May being 17.4 cents. The June report shows the average cost per dozen on 54,930 hens was 12.1 cents above cost of feed, and the profit per hen above cost of feed was 12.7 cents. This data should serve to show that it is possible to make money out of poultry, the above figures being taken on two lean months in the poultry business.

Dairymen Plans Pasture

A visit to the Frank Merka dairy farm on Tuesday of this week revealed the fact that a tractor and disc harrows were being put into condition for fall sowing of oats, rye and barley. Let us remember the cheapest feed the dairy cow can get is that which she obtains from a good pasture, both winter and summer.

Signs of Progress

Whenever you hear farmers talking about getting their land tilled, sowing fall grain for winter pasture and to prevent soil washing, planning a better balanced system of farm crops, and not depending altogether on cotton alone, it bespeaks a better day for agriculture.

EDITORIAL OF THE DAY

THE "YELLOW PERIL" FADES OUT

One of the greatest victories of the international peace movement in recent years has been the laying of the boggy of a war between the United States and Japan. It has also been one of the least heralded. Almost unperceived, expressions of amity have taken the place of war talk. What a difference between ten years ago and now! Then, a tension between the two countries was keenly felt. Now, it has been almost entirely eliminated.

On opposite sides of the United States, competent authorities have been voicing their concepts of cordiality between Japan and the United States. At Williamstown, Mass., an American admiral shows the absurdity of any fears which either country may have entertained of the other. A former member of the Japanese Diet dwells upon the absurdity of attributing to Japan any designs upon the Philippine Islands. An Assistant Secretary of State, recently American Ambassador to Japan, brands the sort of chatter which was so prevalent ten years ago as "nonsense."

Meanwhile a Chinese judge recognizes a certain friendliness in Japan's present policy toward his country, and declares that Japan is falling into line with the United States in this respect.

While a Japanese editor, speaking in Berkeley, Calif., is explaining that only one "dark spot"—the Japanese Exclusion Act—remains to mar the harmonious relations between his country and the United States, an American professor at Williamstown is declaring that the prospects for lighting up this "dark spot" are bright, and a Senator from the Pacific coast State of California has stated he would favor a bill asking Congress to place Japanese immigrants on a quota basis, like other foreigners who come to America.

A great change in sentiment is said to have taken place on the Pacific coast since 1924 with regard to treatment of the Japanese question. As one looks back a little further and recalls, from the dim distance, the friction that arose over Shantung and other questions, it is possible to realize what a vast improvement has been made. There have been many contributing factors, but certainly the Washington Conference was an important one. At any rate, it has become apparent that the one-time supposed "yellow peril" was largely a creature of "yellow journalism."—Christian Science Monitor.

Daily Bible Thought

The Great Prize—Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.—Phil. 3:13, 14.

Political Notes

Colonel Alfred P. C. Petsch who hails from Fredericksburg and is democratic nominee for representative from that district which includes Gillespie, Kendall, Blanco, and Llano counties, has an opponent, William Dietel, Fredericksburg publisher, who has announced on the independent ticket. The Dietel and Petsch publishing companies are rivals here. Mr. Dietel publishing an English language weekly and Mr. Petsch, president of the rival company, publishing German and English language weeklies in which Petsch is a columnist.

Now comes Fort Worth claiming the first baby namesake for the democratic gubernatorial nominee, Ross S. Sterling. Meet Master Ross Sterling Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Adams. He was born August 17. Waco also claims the first namesake of Governor-To-Be Ross Sterling. This is an honor for Fort Worth and Waco to settle between themselves.

Little Corabeth Powers, five year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Powers, is celebrating her birthday this afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock by inviting in the neighborhood children to play. Corabeth has never passed a milestone without merry-making so she had to have a play if not a big party.

Mrs. G. D. Butler, who formerly made her home here and for several months has been a resident of Ferriday, La., is here for a visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Adams.

"Europe is almost as pretty as Yellow Stone Park, Grand Canyon and Niagara Falls," writes Mrs. P. S. Tilson of Houston, who is traveling this summer in Europe, to Bryan friends. "Enjoyed Jerusalem. Rode the donkey, around the walls and camel in the Sahara desert and didn't fall off. Cairo was a surprise to me, immense and up-to-date everywhere. Nice is lovely, as was Rome, Paris and Naples." Mrs. Tilson is traveling with Mrs. Dona Carnes.

Woman's Suffrage Ten Years Old On Tuesday; Plan Campaign Now For Equal Constitutional Right

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(AP)—Ten years ago Tuesday the right of women to vote throughout the United States was proclaimed.

The slender, quiet man who made valid the instrument of announcement—Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state—performed the act without benefit of news cameramen. It was a sweltering day. A messenger ran up the walk of a spacious residence, the secretary took the proclamation, carried it to his desk and quietly signed it. The Nineteenth Amendment was in effect.

Women's organizations preparing to celebrate this decennial anniversary of their victory discovered that not a single picture was made of the event. Its simplicity throws into sharper cut lines the events of the strenuous years preceding.

Leaders are recalling those years. They are calling a swift-moving succession of events, in each of which the same eager, determined faces appear—Alice Paul, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Dr. Anna Shaw, Mary Garrett Hay, Inez Milholland, Maud Younger.

While they reminisce, they look forward to another campaign for a blanket declaration of "equal rights" for men and women in the constitution. The National Woman's party is going after an amendment carrying this declaration.

Rare in history is the campaign like that the women waged for the ballot. It goes back to 1878, when the Susan B. Anthony amendment was introduced. Forty years later to a day the house passed the measure for the first time, but not until the last month of 1912 did the issue become a snowball of public opinion.

Then Alice Paul, slim young social worker came from New Jersey and started work. Women flocked to her command. Her generalship is still a thing for conversation.

The day Woodrow Wilson came to town for his first inauguration, she had a parade in progress. The feminists say the President-elect stepped from his train asking, "Where are the people?" and was answered "Down on the avenue, watching the suffragists."

That procession was dispersed by the police. But within a few weeks a deputation of women was knocking at the President's door. Five times that year they demanded his support in vain. They concentrated on adding to the number of states giving women the vote.

Through the years more deputations went to the President. On Jan. 9, 1917, President Wilson informed them he would receive no more; that their next step must be to convert public opinion. The next Loetta Brown, both of Houston. The marriage ceremony was solemnized Saturday evening at the First Baptist church in Houston, with Rev. M. G. Payne, pastor of the Houston Harbor church as the officiating minister. Following the marriage a brilliant reception was tendered in honor of the bride and groom at the home of the groom's aunt, Mrs. O. C. Jersig. Mr. and Mrs. Payne will reside in Houston at their new home on Clay avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Markel and Mr. and Mrs. P. F. English are leaving Tuesday morning by automobile for a ten days vacation trip. They will visit Galveston, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and other summer resorts before returning home.

Mrs. R. M. Hamberlin of Vicksburg, Miss., formerly Miss Susie Butler of this city, and her brother George B. Butler Jr. student at University of Texas are in Bryan for a visit in the home of their aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Adams at their home on East 27th street.

Miss Mary Lily Fountain, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Fountain after spending the summer vacation most pleasantly with her parents in this city, will leave Thursday for East Hampton, Long Island, where she will be supervisor of music in the public schools of that city.

Mrs. S. C. Hoyle and son Sam C. Hoyle Jr., of Bryan, and Tom Sammons Jr. of Mission, are touring Colorado by automobile this week.

Fields Smith of Dallas, a student at A. and M. College, who has been taking work in summer school left Saturday for his home. While here Fields, as he was familiarly known to his friends made his home with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brock.

Mrs. I. H. Johnson has returned from a pleasant week-end visit in Houston with her brother, Tom Evans and family.

Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Lockard have returned from Temple where they spent the week-end with Mrs. Lockard's father, Mr. Brewer, who has been in a Temple hospital for treatment for several weeks. Mrs. Lockard reports that her father is improving and hopes to be able to be in a wheeled chair some time during the coming week.

Mrs. G. V. Doyle and children who have been in Houston for the past week visiting relatives and friends, have returned to Bryan. Mr. Doyle joined them in Houston Saturday to attend the marriage of his cousin, H. L. Beard to Miss day found them picketing the White House.

Peaceful picketing continued—in rain, in sleet, in snow—until police began a series of arrests. Between 400 and 500 women were arrested; before the end, Miss Paul, the leader had been placed under observation in a psychopathic ward. Some actually went to the workhouse, served their sentences and returned to their picketing.

But out of prison was born fresh inspiration. A "prison special" was steaming through the country, carrying the former prisoners to tell the story.

In January, 1918, President Wilson declared himself in favor of the amendment. The next day it passed the house, only to be defeated in the senate. Then began intensive lobbying, which, Miss Paul later said, "cost $50,000 in five months and resulted in a gain of five senators." With the beginning of the special session in 1919—called to pass appropriation bills—the women renewed their efforts. They encountered tremendous criticism for persisting at this time, but they weathered the storm of censure.

On June 4 the senate passed the amendment by a slender margin. There was great rejoicing, but the leaders did not stop until the thirty-sixth state, Tennessee, had ratified.

The final act in their drama did not occur until 1920, when, at the Republican national convention in Chicago, they marched, line beside line, each bearing a banner reading: "We are here. Where is the thirty-sixth state?"

Hunnicutt suffered the fracture of one bone in his right forearm just after noon today, when the motor of his car backfired as he was cranking it, and the handle of the crank spun back and struck him on the arm just above the wrist. Hosiery Salesman Again Jailed on Swindling Charge

Recently Hill was jailed on complaint of a customer but straightened out his account with her and she refused to prosecute.

According to county officials Hill has been receiving money on account, with orders, and then having hosiery shipped with the full price attached. He also has used other methods, County Attorney A. S. Ware states, of swindling his customers out of small sums of money.

PAVEMENT PICK-UPS

"Really we are serious about the business men of Texas adopting the overall as a regulation uniform until cotton reaches a higher price. And after all they are a lot cooler, too, than some of the garments we now wear," said a member of the Early Risers Club. Buy a pair of overalls joined with Governor Moody's buy-a-bale program might have some effect on the market. It is worth trying at any rate.

"I supported Ferguson for governor and was defeated but now I am going to vote the Democratic ticket in the general election regardless of what comes up. I have never scratched the Democratic ticket and never will," said R. L. Jones of Steep Hollow community. Mr. Jones is a good loser.

Texas did not lead the states in population gains in the 1930 census, standing sixth in numerical increases. But it retained fifth place in standing of the states with a population of 5,821,272 or 10,589 more than a previously announced total. To achieve the slogan, "Third State in 1930," Texas in the next decade must pass Illinois and Ohio.

Whether you believe it or not soil terracing now includes 3,700,000 acres in 202 Texas counties.

On the streets of Bryan one hears "oil talk" on most every corner. While, as yet, there is no real oil well in this county, it is believed by many "oil-inclined" men that it will not be long before a real oil well is brought in somewhere in this county. Drilling is being done now in Grimes county at Anderson; Washington county to the south of us near Brenham, and in Burleson county just across the Brazos river. There is much rumor about tests starting soon. A group of some dozen men are in Bryan now exploring for oil and it may be that this will be the "year" for making of this an oil county. Who knows?

"I take my hat off to the merchants of Bryan as artists in the line of window displays," said a visitor to our city today, who mentioned as especially commendable the artistic arrangement of merchandise in the windows of our business district, as well as the lighting effects and the plainly written price tags.

"Cotton is no good," said Dominick Angonia of Steeles Store who was a visitor to town today, when asked about the 1930 cotton crop. Mr. Angonia is one of the Brazos Valley's best farmers. He has made a success as few others have. He came to Texas with nothing but good health and willingness to work and today he has accumulated sufficient to retire from active work.

The rain Sunday night and Monday seems to have "cleared" the atmosphere of politics. Since the election there has been little discussion compared to that which has prevailed for the past weeks. Those who were talking of course were telling how "it all happened" but most of the people now seem relieved to know that it's all over; that a governor has been nominated and now people can settle down to their every day lives without the interference of a hot political campaign seems to be gratifying to most every one. The feeling seems to exist that both sides did their very best, the people have spoken and that's the end of the fair, until the General Election, which, from present appearances will be about as the usual general election. The primary is still the big election day in Texas—the Democrats, as heretofore, have carried their fight to the primary, after which they become solidified. One strong Ferguson supporter said today, "Well, I did my best to put Ferguson in—he lost out, so now I'm in great hopes that Sterling will make Texas the real governor his friends and supporters have told us he would. I am for him from now on out. Texas needs a good governor and I hope that Ross Sterling will be that since he has carried the Democratic primary, and I feel that will be the way most of our side will feel. We're good losers as well as good fighters, and if I could be of assistance in any way in helping Sterling's administration, I would certainly be glad to do it. He's my governor, or will be, just the same as he will be the governor of his supporters."

"I don't know much about the laws of Texas but I've wondered if the regulations governing the lighting equipment for automobiles and trucks specified two headlights or if only one were legal," said R. J. Dunn, director of the Texas A. and M. Band Saturday night.

"The reason I am in doubt on this point is that every time I drive into Bryan from College and return home, in the evening or at night time, when lights are necessary, I pass anywhere from half a dozen to a dozen or more cars with only one light.

"In view of this fact I would like to suggest that if one light is permitted that the law be revised making it mandatory that this light be placed at a middle point on the front of the car, as a locomotive head light is placed. If this were done the approaching motorists could at least figure about how close to the light would be within the margin of safety.

"But if two lights are required by law then something should be done to check the use of 'one-eyed cars,' as they constitute a real danger, especially on rough and narrow highways," concluded the genial band director.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN—

who have attended professional schools—still do not know exactly what they want to do, Mr. Barton points out. Hence he makes his first point:

"Find work in which you will be happy, something you really want to do."

Perhaps it will not pay as well at the start as some other job that is offered, he concedes. But in the long run the boy who goes in for salesmanship because it seems to pay better at the start than the ministry or mechanics, which he may really love, is likely to prove a failure.

"Analyze your childhood and school years," he advises, "and you will almost invariably find some dominant characteristic, some trait or some interest which is valuable as a clue. It may be a bent for selling, for nursing, for mathematics, mechanics or art. Do not ignore it. It may point toward the work you will do happily not only now but 20 years from now."

Mr. Barton's other five points of counsel are these:

1. Study the future of the field you consider entering. Consider the men who envisioned the future of the automobile 30 years ago. Always certain businesses are expanding, others are standing still, others have reached the point of diminishing returns. Try to choose an enterprise which is going to grow.

2. College graduates seem to run after certain jobs in droves. When I was in high school every second lad wanted to be an engineer. More recently banking and advertising have had a special lure. The biggest problem of modern business is retail merchandising, yet few college graduates look for work in retail stores. Look around and see if some neglected business is not more attractive because the crowd has passed it by.

3. Don't start too high. The man-traps of business are the nice white collar jobs that require only a pleasant personality. The future presidents of industry are starting in the shops, the section gangs and stock-rooms. Later on they will know the business from the ground up and have experience and judgment that the office man cannot acquire.

4. Don't rush to the city for a job merely because the crowd is doing it. Perhaps for that very reason you will be happier and more successful in a smaller town.

5. You must have staying power. No matter how attractive or romantic a job may look from the outside, there will be dreariness and disappointments. You should expect them and discount them from the start. It is the ability to stay with the job through good and bad that accounts for the majority of real successes.

Former Bryanite Sent on Mission To Sunny Spain

Friends of Miss Elizabeth West, who formerly made her home in Bryan and is now librarian at West Texas Technological College at Lubbock will be interested to know that she has been granted a two years' leave of absence from her duties at that institution in order that she may search the archives of Spain for documents and information related to Texas history.

This appointment came through congress and was a complete surprise to Miss West, since it was unsolicited. She is making preparation to leave soon for Spain to begin this interesting and important piece of study.

Miss West is the daughter of the late Dr. J. D. West, who was pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Bryan for a number of years and was at one time employed in the library at the state capital in Austin. Her sister, Miss Elizabeth, was formerly employed in the Extension Service at A. and M. College.

ENDOWMENT—

ed more than $600,000 in bonuses for the lease of oil lands and has $1,000,000 to its credit as the result of a suit involving the exploitation of tracts of the school.

The land endowment of the university totals 2,221,100 acres and was presented to the institution by the legislature when the state was money poor and land rich.

During the early years of the university, the land was leased for rental purposes at the rate of 50 cents per acre a year.

Then oil was discovered on some of the university's holdings and things began to happen in a big way at the school. Not only was oil discovered on its property, but it was discovered in hither-to undreamed of quantities. Now several of the tracts of the university are regarded as the richest oil lands in the nation, with oil companies constantly demanding more leases.

Recently one company paid a bonus of $78,000 for a lease on one tract of 610 acres in addition to an annual rental of $1 per acre and one-eighth royalty on all oil, gas and other minerals produced.

The initial grant of 221,400 acres was made before the university was established and was brought about through the efforts of M. B. Lamar, president of the Republic of Texas, in 1839. Lamar was an advocate of higher education of learning and at that early date, when the idea of establishing the university of Texas was only a dream, visualized the school as one of the finest on the western continent.

In 1860, however, most of the land was taken back from the university and sold to provide funds to protect the frontier.

After the war the money was returned to the university.

Under the act of 1853, the university was to receive every one-tenth section of land surveyed in the state. This act was repealed in the constitutional convention of 1876 and the university given a fee simple grant of 1,000,000 acres. Under an act passed by the legislature in 1883, an additional 1,000,000 acres was granted the university to bring the total to 2,221,100.

The surface or soil value of the lands has been set at $10,000,000. Its potential mineral value, however, is much greater.

H. Walker, commissioner of the general land office, said he conservatively estimated the royalty fund would reach $200,000,000. He stated this was less than a return of $100 per acre.

Although the university oil business is still in its infancy, it has gained considerable note, not only for its unprecedented growth, but also because of certain whisperings of mismanagement on the part of leasing officials. A committee of the house of representatives now is engaged in investigating charges that there have been irregularities in conducting the leasing of the land that has cost the university large sums of money.

Originally the grant of land was made to provide funds for the establishment of two state colleges or universities. This requirement, however, was met through the establishment of a co-educational institution. Recently, the board of regents of the school approved a plan to divide the income from the oil royalty fund with the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College.

With millions more scheduled to pour into the coffers of the school, it was predicted the fund would reach a mark for other universities to shoot at for years to come.

Other richly endowed institutions include Columbia University, $600,000,000; Yale, $41,000,000; University of Chicago, $35,000,000; Duke University, $28,000,000; Leeland Stanford, $28,000,000; University of Rochester, $25,000,000; Cornell and Ohio Hopkins, $20,000,000; McGill University, $18,000,000; Princeton and Carnegie Institute of Technology, $15,000,000; Northwestern, $11,000,000; Washington University, St. Louis, and University of Pennsylvania, $13,000,000; University of Toronto, $11,000,000, and Rice Institute of Houston, $10,000.

Former Citizens Here on Visit

After an absence of 18 years Mrs. J. M. Carnes, former citizen of Bryan, is here for a return visit. Mrs. Carnes is the mother of Malcolm Carnes, who at one time published the Bryan Daily Eagle and at present is living in Beaumont. While here she was a guest in the home of Mrs. J. W. Coulter.

"Bryan has made many changes both in its citizenship and business establishments," said Mrs. Carnes. "One can hardly recognize it as being the same place. And I want to say it is the best town of any where near its size in Texas, that we have touched on a tour of many hundreds of miles."

Mrs. Carnes was accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. J. F. Plainsfield of Tampa, Fla. Mrs. Plainsfield will be remembered in Bryan as Miss Alice Lucas and for some years taught art in the Bryan Baptist Academy, which now is Edge apartments. Mr. and Mrs. Plainsfield while in Bryan were guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Mike. The party was traveling by auto and left this morning for Houston.

Vote Is Record; Sterling's Lead May Hit 100,000

DALLAS, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Interests in Saturday's runoff Democratic primary had simmered down Monday night to the question of the total vote cast and the majority of the several victorious candidates, particularly Ross S. Sterling of Houston, nominee for governor.

Sterling, wealthy publisher and chairman of Governor Dan Moody's Highway Commission, defeated Mrs. Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson, former Governor, and wife of former Governor James E. Ferguson, Moody's arch enemy.

The vote already had exceeded the previous record of $34,412 and there was a probability it would pass $50,000. Sterling's majority may reach 100,000.

R. B. Creager of Brownsville, Republican national committeeman whose party selected its nominee in the first primary in July, today made his first comment on the result of Saturday's election. He said the Republicans would wage a vigorous campaign this fall and the results might be surprising.

"The Democratic party is so split its members can not lie down in the same bed," Creager stated. The state has never elected a Republican governor since the reconstruction period, but Creager and Dr. George C. Butte, G. O. P. gubernatorial nominee, had predicted a Republican victory in the event Mrs. Ferguson had been nominated.

"Farmer Jim" Ferguson remained silent and Democrats wondered whether the election had forever blasted his political chances and what were his plans for the future. They also looked ahead to the state convention at Galveston Sept. 9.

Drouth Stricken Farmers of Sooner State Being Asked About Programs Of Year When They Ask for Relief

BY NELL BENTLEY

Preparing to administer funds that are to be made available for relief to individual farmers who have suffered losses due to the continued drouth in that state, a conference of Extension Service workers, leading bankers and others active in work connected with farm welfare and prosperity in Oklahoma offered as its first conclusion that every farmer applying for aid should first present evidence that he has made every possible effort to supply the needs of his family and farmstead through the planting of fall feed and pasture crops and fall gardens.

Already, rain has fallen over much of that stricken area lying in Oklahoma, Kansas and Missouri, and while the growing season is considerably shorter there than here, grains for grazing, grain sorghums for feed and fall gardens to supply the home tables are being planted as fast as ground can be prepared and seed obtained.

No source of supply for food on the family table or feed in the barn lots and pastures of the county should be overlooked at this time, and any farm having a flock of hens or pullets will do well to begin now to study the feed and housing needs for the flock which will give the greatest return in eggs through the fall and winter. A bit of planning for home cured pork and home produced dairy products will be equally advantageous.

While the county agent can possibly advise just what will be best for laying flocks and the cheapest way to secure a balanced feeding ration, a patch of green stuff will be one of the requisites and wheat, oats, rye, turnips and collards are among the most popular plantings to obtain that item for the poultry flock. The planting, of course, should be made near the poultry yard, if the best results are to be obtained and if only small enclosed areas are planted, fencing that will provide for alternate range so that the flock may be changed about and let one lot grow while the other is being eaten, will mean greater economy and more abundant supply.

Cow peas, sudan grass, millet and sorghum will all have ample time to mature for hay in Brazos county, if planted by September 10. Every ton of this kind of forage stored away in the barns and feed lots of the county will be worth more than its market value to farmers who have work stock and growing animals to be brought through the winter season and the need for such feed will be accentuated this year in more than the usual degree because the native pasture grass has been so stunted and depleted by the continued drouth and excessive heat of the summer. Wheat, oats and clovers for grazing will pay well even if planted with the idea of plowing them under at planting season in the spring. Wheat, oats or rye pasture would be considered poor ration for dairy cows on test for economical and efficient production for market, but when milk and butter for the family table are the only consideration, the cow suffers little in physical strain and often holds out in production to a satisfactory degree if the grain pasture is good. Young cattle will winter very satisfactorily on a grain pasture with a little corn chops, bran and cotton seed meal to supply the concentrates necessary to healthy growth and development. Work stock, too, will fare much better to have a grain pasture along with the limited amount of roughage and grain feed that will be meted out to animals on the average farm of this section this year.

In many "tight land" fields, it will be impossible of course to do any planting until there has been sufficient rainfall so that the land may be plowed and prepared for planting, but in the case of sandy soils, seed might well be planted and be ready for growing when the rain comes. Cow peas and sudan grass can be planted in corn middles; wheat, oats or rye between cotton rows; and millet or sorghum might be planted on any soil that is sandy in texture so that it can be properly covered.

Look over the possibilities for winter grown pasture and gardens on your own farm and do a little planning now so that when the rain comes you will be ready to provide your own farm relief as far as is humanly possible or practical. There will be trying times for many before another crop can be grown in Brazos county and the family with plenty of eggs, chickens, milk and home cured pork will be "sitting pretty," while those who bring young stock and work stock through the winter in good shape will be well on the way to a prosperous year when fortune begins to smile on Texas agriculture.

There will be a concert given at the high school auditorium Saturday night, August 30, by Bob Parker and His "Gang." Everyone is invited. No admission.

RED CHAIN Egg Mash

PUTS IN THE EGG BASKET

WHAT OTHERS PUT ON PAPER

A fair feeding test of RED CHAIN is the best way to clear up conflicting claims about egg mash—Talk is cheap—and anyone can find nine words in the dictionary. On paper most feeds claim "more eggs at less cost"—but RED CHAIN actually does what others claim to do! Don't buy your egg mash for what it does on paper—buy it for what it puts in the egg basket—Feed RED CHAIN to your own hens and see the difference between claims and results. It is the unequalled quality of RED CHAIN Egg Mash that makes it the cheapest egg producer—regardless of price.
